To the Editor of The Times:
Santa Monica, Calif., Aug. 3.—Somebody said we had a chance to sell Germany some wheat and cotton on time. Sure, let 'em have all they want and take the pay out in good German beer. Then pass a law that if you found a man drinking whiskey he gets ten years. If everybody had all the beer they wanted, they would naturally be against the whiskey drinker and would help enforce the law against him. Then you would have a popular law. Put a good tax on the beer and that would take care of the unemployment fund. A bushel of wheat for a big "growler of Wusberger" wouldn't be a bad trade. That's about all the ideas I got today.

Yours,
Will Rogers.

Home Burns During Early Morning Hours

Fire of unknown origin at about 2 o'clock Saturday morning destroyed an eight-room dwelling near Roundville on the road to Pen-Mar, occupied by Mrs. Mary Wolford and her son, Charles, causing a loss of between $2500 and $3000.

Young Wolford was awakened shortly after 2 o'clock by a crackling noise. He opened a door leading into the southeast corner of the house and found that entire section of the house a mass of flames.

Charles and his mother fled from the house and in the meantime neighbors had been awakened by the reflection of the fire was not given in the first call firemen were delayed somewhat and when they arrived were unable to control the blaze. About 17 years ago the Wolford property was destroyed by fire.

The Waynesboro community pumper responded but owing to the fact the location of the fire was not given in the first call firemen were delayed somewhat and when they arrived were unable to control the blaze. About 17 years ago the Wolford property was destroyed by fire.

Scientist Examines Hoppers And Finds Them To Be Locusts

The short-horned grasshoppers which are gathering about the arc lights of the cities these hot nights are the Dissotera Carolina in case you're curious to know the insect's name and address. Or if you're not so scientifically inclined you may call him the Carolina locust. He is dusk colored and short-winged.

This identification was made by A. B. Champlain, entomologist of the state department of agriculture. Speaking further of the locust Champlain went on:

"This insect is distributed generally over the United States and Canada, except in high elevations. Its usually occurs along roadsides, in cultivated fields and in places where there is more or less bare earth. Apparently the bright lights of the city have a special charm for these plant eating hoppers, especially during warm weather. But it is exceptional to find so many of them about town where their favorite vegetable or plant food is scarce."

Another pageant will be staged on the seminary campus at 6 o'clock this evening by the demonstration school. A number of young girls will take part in this event.

Trouble Follows Trout Fishers; Last 2 Weeks Best of Season

Bass Fishermen Better Off Although July Proved Poor Month To Catch Game Fish; Many Showers Cause Of Muddy Streams.

Fishermen's luck! If it's not one thing, it's another for state anglers, says the Associated Press.

Early last year there were enough trout in Pennsylvania streams to gratify the most voracious angler, but the long drought made conditions so bad that many fishermen gave up in disgust before the season was very old.

This year the streams appeared in good condition for the April opening, but the late hatching of flies ruined the early part of the season. Officials connected with the board of fish commissioners estimated that the first three weeks of the 1931 season were of little use to the old timers because of the late hatching of flies. Veteran anglers who spurn worms had to wait.

Late Anglers Rewarded
But despite the poor start, the fish officials predicted that the 1931 season which closed July 31 would be found to have been as satisfactory as last year. Ideal conditions in the past two weeks, they said, amply rewarded those anglers who had not become discouraged by the poor

RAID POOL HALL IN NEW OXFORD; FIND NO LIQUOR

F. J. Rider's Place Given "Clean Bill Of Health" By State Police.

MANY PERSONS ARE KEPT AWAKE

F. J. Rider's combination restaurant, dance hall and poolroom in New Oxford was given a "clean bill of health" by state police after a raid on the place, Saturday evening at 9 o'clock.

"I feel sure no liquor has been served on the premises," Corporal Joseph Holochwost asserted today, "although I do believe young fellows, who have been frequenting the place, have been carrying in liquor themselves and drinking it there."

Rider's place has been under surveillance for several months, state police from Harrisburg having been detailed to secure evidence, if any, of any violation of the liquor laws by the proprietor.

Reported As Nuisance
According to state police, the place has been reported as a public nuisance both to the local sub-station and to Harrisburg on numerous occasions. According to reports, young people have been congregating at the place, dancing, singing and shouting until long after midnight.

About twenty persons were in the place when the raid was staged, but none of the patrons was molested by the officers. The restaurant, dance hall and poolroom were thoroughly searched for contraband beverages, but nothing was found.

Kept Awake by Noise
Residents of New Oxford have been up in arms against the conduct of the patrons of the dance hall for several months. Persons residing in the vicinity have been kept awake nights by the noise of the customers.

The raiding party was in charge of Corporal Joseph Holochwost, of the local sub-station of the state police, and he was assisted by Troopers M. J. Walsh and Michael Waselowski, both of Chambersburg, and Constable George B. Aughbaugh, Gettysburg.

Investigation In Shooting Meets Victim's Silence

The state police investigation into the shooting of Hershel Deardorff, 23, of Gettysburg, at the Marsh creek hunting club camp last Thursday evening reached an impasse today with the victim still refusing to name the person who shot him, if he knows.

The officers believe Deardorff knows who shot him, but that loyalty prompts the youth to withhold the name. The trooper who is investigating believes the shooting was accidental.

Although the young man still is week from the loss of blood, Warner hospital authorities today said he is holding up as well as could be expected.

Emmitsburg Barn Burns On Sunday

The dairy barn of Theodore Bollinger was destroyed and an adjoining warehouse owned by R. F. Maxwell was partially burned by fire Sunday night. The loss was estimated at about $5,000.

Fire companies from Thurmont and Taneytown aided the Emmitsburg firemen in fighting the blaze.

Members of the One Hundred and Fourth Medical regiments, Maryland national guard, who had just finished a band concert in the town, were the first to discover the blaze and the men, headed by Captain Richard C. O'Connell, fought the flames until the arrival of the firemen. The guardsmen moved several trucks from one of the buildings.

BARN DAMAGED BY FIRE
A stable to the rear of the property of Joseph Tennant, Chambersburg street, caught fire this afternoon at 2 o'clock and the roof and some of the barn's contents were slightly damaged by the flames.

The fire was discovered by George A. Taylor, who conducts a grocery store next door. He called the Gettysburg fire company and the blaze was quickly extinguished. Sparks from a nearby brush pile were blamed.

WANT MONEY TO FINISH SURVEY

Wickersham Commission's Work On Federal Courts Remains Unfinished.

Washington, Aug. 3 (AP)—A plea from Chairman Wickersham, of the law enforcement commission for the raising of $25,000 to carry on the commission's incomplete survey of the federal courts was made public Sunday at the White House.

In a letter to President Hoover, attached to what was called "a progress report on the duty of the federal courts," Wickersham indicated that this sum, if raised, would be turned over to the American Law institute.

He said the commission had found it "inexpedient to apply to congress" for more funds to carry on the work. The Rockefeller foundation, however, the said, had donated half of the $50,000 needed on condition that the other half be raised and the American Law institute step "into the shoes of the commission."

What They Hope To Learn—The lengthy and technical progress report to which this letter was attached said the survey hoped eventually to get to the root of such problems as congestion, "bargain days" and the actual effects upon the courts of prohibition and other laws.

It was prepared by a committee of eight nationally known legal scholars, under the chairmanship of Dean Charles E. Clark, of the Yale law school. Other members were: Justice Roberts, of the United States supreme court; President Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago; Dean Orrin K. McMurray, of the University of California law school; Professor E. M. Morgan, of the Harvard law school; Dean Thurman W. Noyd, of the law school of West Virginia; Dean Henry M. Completes 300-Mile Trek With Baby, 2 Months Old Baltimore, Aug. 3.—The lure that hitch-hiking holds for Mrs. Nicey Gay, who has just completed a 300-mile trek from Wheeling, West Virginia, with Billie, her 2-month-old son, has led her to propose that her mother accompany them on their next hike, she confided Sunday.

At her parents' farm near Glenburnie, where she 24-year-old hitch-hiker is recuperating from the effects of three days spent in various conveyances between the West Virginia city and Baltimore, Mrs. Gay discussed her idea of making a return trip as a trio.

"Mother would be crazy about hitch-hiking if she had hiked as much as I have," the younger woman explained. "The trouble is, she's never tried it. I want her to hike with me out to Wheeling; then she can come back by train if she wants to."

Made Trip Before Her present trip which took from Wednesday to Friday, was not Mrs. Gay's first acquaintance with hitch-hiking. She traversed the same ground in much the same manner in May, when Billie was scarcely two weeks old.

"It's easy when you're a woman," Mrs. Gay explained with the air of a veteran hitch-hiker. "Anybody will give you a lift, where they might be afraid if it was a man."

Lacks Enthusiasm Mrs. Sadie Wilson, the mother, wasn't sharing her daughter's enthusiasm Sunday.

"But she'll come around yet, you'll see," optimistically asserted Mrs. Gay.

The way the young woman has it figured out, the return trip might take four or five days, considering that her mother would be a rookie, but then she wouldn't be concerned about setting a record if Mrs. Wilson would only go along.

LOSE DAY FROM FORCED LANDING

Pangborn And Herndon Reach Chita, Siberia, And Hop Off Again.

Moscow, Aug. 3 (AP)—America's second pair of round-the-world fliers, Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, Jr., reached approximately the halfway point on their round-the-world flight Sunday when they landed at Chita, Siberia, at 1 p. m. Moscow time (6 a. m. Eastern daylight time), just a half hour short of being five full days out of New York.

Ending the 1,700-mile hop from Omsk without a stop, the airmen refueled and took off for Khabarovsk at 5:30 p. m. (10:30 a. m. Eastern daylight time).

When they landed at Chita they had consumed 11 1/2 hours since they left New York, which placed them almost a full day behind the mark of Post and Gatty at the same point.

Lost in Forced Landing They lost time when they were forced down Saturday at Jietegari, over 500 miles southwest of Omsk, but they were keeping in mind that Post and Gatty lost twenty-six hours in a mudhole at Blagovoshensk, which time they hope they can pick up if they avoid adversity on the remainder of their journey.

Lindberghs Reach Canadian Outpost

Churchill, Man., Aug. 3.—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived in this far-northern outpost of civilization late Sunday after a 760-mile flight from Moose Factory along the bleak shores of Hudson bay.

The Japan-bound Lindberghs splashed the steel pontoons of their black and scarlet monoplane into the choppy harbor at 5:30 p. m.

Lindbergh spent more than an hour and a half, with the assistance of a harbor crew in mooring the plane satisfactorily for the night. Mrs. Lindbergh remained in the plane until the work was finished.

Scores of canoes and motorboats plied between shore and the monoplane, carrying villagers and backwoodsmen who wanted a glimpse of the famous flying pair. Mrs. Lindbergh smiled and both she and her husband consented to pose for amateur photographers.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindbergh were taken ashore together in a motorboat at 7:25 p. m. They went immediately to the home of George Kydd, resident engineer of the department of railways and canals in charge of the Hudson Bay railway terminals.

Kydd, a bachelor, vacated his cottage and opened it to the Lindberghs for their stay here.

STOCK REPORT

New York, Aug. 3 (AP)—With a mildly cheerful undertone financial markets blazed through another session of midsummer quiet today. Stocks maintained a slow upward tendency, and bonds pushed forward at the start although some irregularly developed later.

Pen Pushers Become Street Car Motormen In Cuban City

Havana, Aug. 3 (AP)—Utilizing "pen pushers" and new employees, the Havana street railway company Sunday morning set rolling again some eighty of its 450 or 500 street cars, idle since motormen and conductors went on strike early Friday.

None of the estimated 2,400 strikers reported for duty. Frank Steinhart, Jr., son of an assistant to the company's president, said.

An ultimatum from Mr. Steinhart, Sr., Saturday warned carmen that those not at their posts and ready for duty Sunday morning would be considered to have resigned.

Police on Some Cars At 7 a. m., the first cars, its platforms occupied by men in civilian clothes, rolled from the barn. Many later cars had policemen aboard. Some employees refused to go out otherwise.

There was no great rush to use the skeletonized car service, busses and taxis continuing to handle the greater part of traffic.

Five strikers were held for possession of pistols. A report that a striking motorman had been killed was denied.

RATIFY ACTION OF OFFICERS ON RATE RAISE

Hagerstown—The action of the board of directors of the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce two weeks ago in endorsing the proposed freight rate increase for the railroads of the country was ratified Friday at a membership meeting held here.

The action of the board two weeks ago was questioned by one member, whose contention that the board could not commit the Chamber membership without a referendum was upheld by Robert H. McCauley, counsel for the Chamber.

Friday's action, however, was made with the reservation that the Chamber's action only applied to the 15 per cent increase asked by the railroads and not to any other rate questions in controversy.

RESCUE 75 OFF BURNING BOAT

Threatened Explosion On Former Sub-chaser Adds To Danger.

New York, Aug. 3 (AP)—In the face of a threatened explosion, seventy-seven passengers, including one woman and two children, were rescued Sunday from the fire-enveloped fishing boat Usona, formerly a submarine chaser.

The captain and his crew of five, who refused to desert the blazing boat, also emerged uninjured.

Fright Grips Passengers an To Ddn Gal B—C Homebound from a deep-sea fishing expedition off Sandy Hook, the Usona, a 110-foot vessel, suddenly caught fire as she was passing Forty-ninth street in the East river. The fire started in the engine room, supposedly from an ignition spark, and gained rapid headway.

Fright gripped the passengers, and there was a scramble for life belts. But boats from the Red Wing Boat club and the United States life saving corps were maneuvering alongside almost immediately. Police launches arrived quickly afterward and the work of transferring the screaming passengers to shore began.

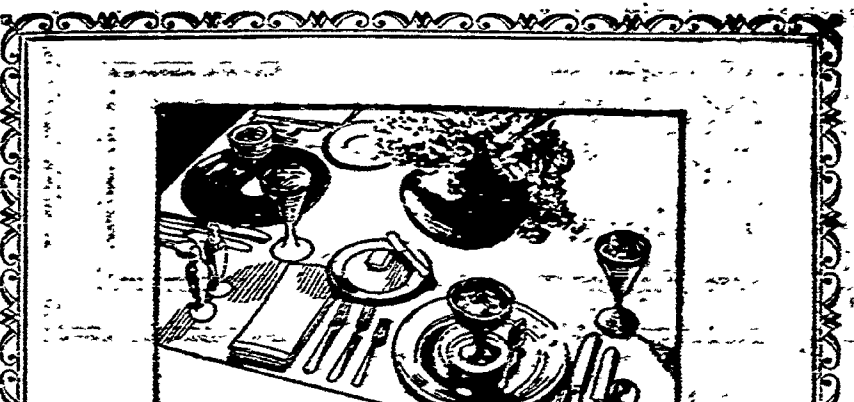

One U-Boat to its Credit The woman and two children were the first taken off. Capt. Arnold Larson and his crew had succeeded in almost extinguishing the blaze when a fireboat arrived.

During the war the Usona was Submarine Chaser No. 151. It had one German U-boat to its credit.

Pick 98 Tons Of Cherries In 2 Orchards

Near York Springs they have been calculating the quantity of cherries by the ton this year. Two farmers reported a total of 98 tons from two orchards in that vicinity as the final picking came to an end last week.

Translated into pounds, the two farms produced 196,000 pounds of cherries, most of which were picked by human hands. Some persons declare the cleaning of one good sized cherry tree, a job, especially with the fruit as plentiful as cherries were this year.

The Snyder brothers and Group have a seven-acre orchard from which 75 tons of cherries were harvested. Oliver Fickel has a 15-acre orchard from which only 23 tons were picked.

Some persons reported cherries to be more plentiful this year than at any time within memory. They hung on the trees in clusters so close together that all that was necessary to get a handful when in the tree was to close it and pull. Picking was not as difficult a job of work this year as it was in 1930 when cherries were scarce.

Sixteen Boy Scouts, members of the Presbyterian church troop in Gettysburg, are at Camp Canoga this week. The troop, accompanied by Charles W. Beechem, the scoutmaster, left for camp last Saturday.

Returning to York Springs for the first time in forty years, George Yeagy, Baltimore, an engineer on the Pennsylvania railroad, paid his birthplace a visit and saw some of his old friends again last week. Mr. Yeagy's parents were Mr. and Mrs.

MOON OF DELIGHT

by Margaret Bell Houston

SYNOPSIS: Juanita Basara, velled cigarette girl, follows Jason Divitt's orders and return to Mrs. Belaise a necklace he had stolen from her in his gambling parlors. Introduced as Senorita Flores at the Belaise home, she refuses the proffered reward, but Mrs. Belaise's grandson, Kirk Stanard, later persuades her to take his mother's ring. On the same evening that Juanita is angered by unwelcome kisses from Eric Ledbetter in the courtyard of the parlors, Divitt introduces her to Marquesa Cabrera, her chaperon. Divitt knows that this woman, his companion before he married Molly, can, while trailing the unsuspecting Juanita into homes of wealth, uncover prospects for robberies. At the Comus ball, Kirk, their escort, invites them to Mrs. Belaise's summer home at Biloxi.

Chapter 16 A PERSISTENT DEVIL

The black Mephisto who came forward when Juanita's name was called was a tricky dancer and she found it not easy at first to follow him. When they fell into step his voice came gratefully.

"I thought for a moment Senorita, that we were not made for each other. Made to dance together, I mean. . . . Do you speak French, Senorita?"

Juanita said no, thought she could read it. English, imperfectly, and Spanish, of course. That was all.

"Your eyes speak any language." "If I had known that," she told him, "I shouldn't have studied English so hard."

"I would have told you, had I been there."

"And I might have believed you. Then how would I explain by my glances that I prefer chocolate to coffee, for instance, and that I like it at nine o'clock?"

"You should not have to give such orders. They should all be administered by those who have intuitions."

"Intuitions are rare, Senor. As it is, I have to drink a good deal of coffee."

Mephisto was silent, tightening his arm about her as the cymbals crashed. They returned to the seats, finding the marquesa taking leave of a pirate.

"I sit next to you at supper," Mephisto breathed, kissing Juanita's hand. "You shall have chocolate."

Mephisto and the pirate gone, the marquesa spoke to Juanita in Spanish. "Is not the devil heavenly? . . . Everything is beautiful, and I am proud of you, Ysabel. But you must not say that you have never been to dances like this, for we have them at the carnivals in Spain."

Juanita danced with the pirate, with a goblin in red, a matador and an Indian, a clown and a sultan. Then Kirk came for his second dance.

"It's gorgeous," Juanita told him. "Too bad they've got to take these nice faces off," Kirk said. "That pirate, for instance, with the fierce black whiskers, is a mild blond, really, with a dimple in his chin."

"That's sad," said Juanita. "Suppose I'd fallen in love with his whiskers?"

"Then there'd be a pirate missing, dimple and all. . . . I'm not feeling particularly merciful toward my fellow Comuses right now. If you knew how they've pushed and elbowed for dances with you—and tried to beat me out of the ones I've got myself. . . . Yes, Biloxi."

"I know now why Biloxi was created. I'm going to take you to Biloxi out of their reach. Don't tell me you'd rather stay here and have pirates and devils pulling at you."

"They haven't pulled."

"Well, they will. I think just one Harlequin pulling all by himself will be more peaceful, don't you?"

"Do Harlequins pull?"

"I imagine so. Yes, given provocation, they pull like forceps in a relentless hand," Kirk answered, holding her close.

"Tell me why so many are dressed as pirates and devils."

"I don't know, Senorita. I can only tell you that in my budding youth I always came to Comus as a devil. . . . Does what we really are crop out at a time like this?"

"More likely it's what we are not," she said.

"But would be if we had the chance," Kirk added. "No, I'm a Harlequin these days because it's the easiest. This year, with Nelly in Biloxi, I wouldn't have come if it hadn't been that—I had to dance with you again. When she's at Biloxi in the summer and at times like this, I get into slippers and turn on the radio. If the radio's bad I go to the piano myself."

"So that's the kind of devil you are?"

"You never heard me play, Senorita. It may not be so harmless as it sounds."

"Will you play for me sometimes?" she asked.

He nodded. "And you will play for me—and sing."

"What makes you think—"

"Your voice is a mezzo," he answered. "Your instrument is not the piano, but the violin. Perhaps the harp."

She shook her head. "But that's odd," she added. "I play the harp a little. The thing I play best—you will smile."

"The guitar!" he cried. "I like the guitar. And if you play the harp, Nelly will never let you go."

The music stopped and the march to supper began to form, the pageant following its queen into a dining room, upon which the exits on one side of the theatre swung open.

At Kirk's table, on Juanita's right, sat the black Mephisto with the marquesa. Here too were the Cheshire cat and the whiskered pirate, with their ladies.

At a blast from a trumpet the Krewe of Comus unmasked, laughed into their ladies' eyes. Juanita turned abruptly to Kirk, who was presenting the cat and the pirate with the dimple in his chin.

"Mr. Cranshaw. . . . Mr. Stephens. . . . And the devil's real name is Mr. Fouché. Never forget that ladies."

Bettina Byrnes on Kirk's left began to talk to him, and at Adrian's murmur Juanita met his eyes again. Adrian's eyes held something of his own surprise. He was not accustomed to strange ladies turning immediately away when he unmasked.

The marquesa had not done it but had said in beautiful French, "Your Satanic Majesty, it is an honor to see you close." Senorita Flores had seemed actually disappointed in his face.

She must have been annoyed by something else.

"Senorita," he was murmuring now, "I have ordered your chocolate."

(Copyright, Dodd, Mead & Co.)

Unmask? Juanita's social conquests would end if she should. Meanwhile, Monday brings Gabrean an important errand.

NEW SECRETARY HOLMES' CLERK

Harvey Bundy Began Law Career Under Aged Jurist In 1914.

By Herbert Plummer

Washington. — That "Grand Old Man" of the supreme court—Oliver Wendell Holmes, now in his 90th year—must have felt a thrill of pride if he read the newspapers a few days ago.

For there was reported the fact that Harvey H. Bundy, of Boston, had that day been sworn in as assistant secretary of state.

Bundy is one of Justice Holmes' proteges. Back in 1914, Bundy, then a youth of 26, and just graduated from the Harvard Law school, came down to Washington to serve as law clerk and secretary of Justice Holmes.

It has long been the custom of the venerable supreme court justice to choose as his helper each year an honor man in the Harvard Law school, graduating class. Bundy won this distinction and from 1914 to 1915 worked side by side with Justice Holmes.

A 17-Year Ronte

But it was a far cry for Bundy from the position of law clerk to the position he now holds.

However, he made it in just 17 years.

During that time, while engaged in the practice of law, he found time for other activities that brought him to the attention of President Hoover. Particularly, as assistant counsel of the food administration under Hoover for two years, the two were closely associated.

It is generally believed in Washington that this contact led the President to bring Bundy to Washington to take over the post vacated by another close Hoover friend—William Castle—when Castle was elevated to undersecretary of state.

Just past his 43rd birthday, the new assistant secretary of state is a tall, blond, bespectacled and handsome man. His dark mustache makes him appear more serious than he really is.

As a matter of fact, his actions on the day he was sworn in impressed everyone present that cheerfulness and a willingness to oblige are his outstanding traits.

Obliging

For on that day news photographers, who had been on his trail for two months, finding him, clamored for pictures. Immediately he assented. At his desk he sat posing in all sorts of positions.

Just when it seemed as if his patience was about exhausted, in trooped the professional cameramen. More posing—in even more numerous positions.

Finally it was all over. Weary, hot and exhausted, he arose, and smilingly addressed them.

"Gentlemen, I trust you are through."

"Of one thing I am sure. You

WOMAN HOLDS KEY POSITION

All Visitors Must Talk To Her Before Seeing Senator Borah.

By Herbert Plummer

Washington—Back in the days before William Borah, of Idaho, came to the senate he had as a stenographer in his law offices at Boise an attractive young lady by the name of Miss Cora Rubin.

Of French Swiss descent on her father's side and of old American stock on her mother's, Miss Rubin was known then as a girl with a sense of humor, a hard worker and the type of person who preferred listening to talking.

Then Borah came to the senate, with him he brought Miss Rubin and installed her in his office as personal stenographer.

Years rolled on until in 1920 the senator made her his chief secretary. She has held that position since.

No Figurehead

As Senator Borah's secretary and as clerk of the foreign relations committee of the senate, of which Borah is chairman, Miss Rubin today holds probably one of the most important minor positions in Washington.

At the present she is in Russia on what is described as an unofficial survey of the country. Recognition of the soviet republic has long been advocated by Senator Borah, and to some observers Miss Rubin's presence there is regarded as significant.

This much is known: the senator reposes the greatest confidence in Miss Rubin. During the years she has been associated with him she has come to know his friends about as well as he does himself.

Her knowledge of the workings of the foreign relations committee is extensive and her understanding of international problems admittedly broad.

Hers is the first office one must enter when seeking an audience with the senator. No one sees Borah without first seeing Cora Rubin.

Sparing in her speech, she has the reputation of being an exceedingly close-mouthed individual. Some describe her as being "like a sphinx."

But all agree that Cora Rubin can't be ruffled under any circumstances, that she is capable of "holding her own" in any situation.

Borah's Barrier

As a matter of fact she is Senator Borah's barrier, and as such she has been highly successful.

She is tall, and her dark hair is bobbed. Those who know her say that she still possesses a keen sense of humor and that away from her duties she is sociable and friendly.

If she seems odd in her manner, have taken enough pictures this morning to last through all my official life."

EVILS OF AMERICAN COLLEGES

(Philadelphia Inquirer)

Dr. Little, former president of the University of Michigan speaking at the Teachers College of Columbia, declares that automobiles liquor and co-education are the three evils of American colleges today.

He says it is the grown-ups who provide the automobiles and the liquor, and he is anxious to think that the students are not fitted to know how to use machines or how to drink wisely. He is probably right; but it is safe to say that the average person regardless of age is no better than the youngsters in this respect. In his opinion it is not advisable to bring mixed undergraduate students together. Coeducation, he insists, is not safe at the present time. It spoils more people than it helps.

The sum and substance of his address was that the colleges should pick their students instead of permitting the students to pick the colleges. And, after they have subscribed to all the conditions, they should be obliged to submit to real discipline. "It is much kinder to them to restrict their privileges," he says. "Students may hate you for it, but the ones who are intelligent and not lazy will know what it is all about." Dr. Little finds many other things not to his liking. He considers that most of the colleges are too easy with the students.

"The curriculum requires too little time, arouses too little enthusiasm and does not intrigue the personality of the students. As a result most of the problems of our American students arise from unwise or stupid use of their leisure time."

There is good sense in this, though much that the critic says is likely to be disputed. It contains material well calculated to arouse controversy. Maybe that is his object. In any event, it may have the effect of preventing college officials from becoming too complacent and self-satisfied.

Gettysburg, Aug. 2.

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

At the annual commencement of Racine college, Wisconsin, which took place on the 24th ult., the degree of D. D. was conferred upon the Rev. Robert H. Clarkson, Rector of St. James church, Chicago, formerly of this place.

Accident: We learn that Mr.

Michael Bree, one of the laborers engaged on the railroad, met with a serious accident on Monday night. A number of them were sleeping on the porch at Mrs.

Brough's when, he, dreaming that someone was after him, jumped off the balcony, fracturing his ankle very badly. He was brought to the Alms-House on Tuesday last.

The names of the men who lost their lives near Caledonia, on Wednesday last by inhaling noxious vapors at the bottom of the shaft at Pond Kane were David Miller, Edward Kane and James Murray. Miller was aged about 20 years, the other two about 35 each.—Two were single and one a married man.

We have rarely, if ever, witnessed so long and severe a thunder storm

as visited this section of our country on Tuesday evening last. For Mountjoy—John Wilson, of C hours there were almost continual flashes of lightning and roar of thunder: some of the claps were startling. Three different fires were visible from this place during the storm, but we have not learned where they were. The rain which fell on that evening and since has revived the drooping vegetation, and given a new impetus to the corn and other vegetables, which were fast sinking under the drought or oppressive heat.

Barn Burnt: On Friday evening

the 25th ult., the barn of Mr. J.

Douglas Taylor, in Butler township was destroyed by fire, with all its contents consisting of grain and hay the latter belonging to Jacob Wagoner the tenant. The fire was caused, it is stated, from a lighted can-

Day by Day

by O. O. McIntyre

Marseilles, Aug. 3.—Next to Paris

this is the largest and most turbulent city in France and perhaps the most colorful seaport in the world. Caesar once stormed its gates. The uncomfortable journey here on the worst train I ever rode upon was inspired solely to kill an ambition of adolescence.

I wanted to see the Chateau d'If, near by, the scene of Alexander

Dumas' novel "The Count of Monte Cristo." No story in boyhood impressed me so vividly and it was thrilling to visit the old fortress in a motor boat and prom about the prison and famous black holes.

Joseph Conrad found Marseilles

the most interesting spot in his sea romance and Edmond Rostand lived here solely because of scenic charm.

Few Paris streets have the robust vitality of Marseilles' leading street

the famous Canebiere, with its wild clutter of huge horse drawn tor-ries.

The city spreads at the water edge in a vast semi-circle. Along the coast is the celebrated Corniche twisting and turning in a far-flung panorama, and from a table in front of the Restaurant Basso on the Quai des Beiges the flowing human tide surpasses that passing the Cafe de la Paix.

We saw bare-foot Lascars, African

Chinese, black-marked Malays one-eyed Hindus, and all the many cheated polyglot that goes down to sea in ships. Also neat ankle girls with eyes for sailors, tanned explorers with pith helmets, monocled dandies, vague old women, ship officers, beefy Dutch colonizers, etc.,

etc. A striking pagoda.

Each morning and evening some ship touches Marseilles after a 32-day journey from Shanghai, Bombay or where-not and as the result there is an eager air. Every other moment a sudden puff of side-wind comes among swaying throngs.

It differs from Paris in lack of the exquisite beauty of dressmaking salons, perfume parlors, jewelry establishments and the like. Marseilles is confined to such shallow and unprosperous pursuits as making cement, lime and dye. By contrast it seems cold, hard suggesting the song, smelling of blood to which it gave its name.

—OO—

The some 800,000 population is perhaps the most unusual mixture to be found the world over. Seamen from all ports come here, marry and as a result of this mingling some of the oddest types of physiognomy are seen. Our waiter, for instance, was almost coal black yet his hair was straight and red and his eyes a sky blue. A neighborly table mate who has been voyaging on P. & O. liners for 18 years told us that save for Haron in Russia

there was no city on the globe offering such a racial fusion.

—OO—

Naturally one must dip into the famous dish of Marseilles here—bouillabaisse. It is a soupy mixture swimming with all sorts of chopped up fish. Food fanciers find it the inspiration for ecstatic gurgling but after a couple of gulps it tastes like a week ago last Tuesday. I tried it in Paris at Premier's years ago and with the same distaste. The French desperately call fish "poisson."

—OO—

But in Marseilles I snagged on the most elegant dessert in Europe. I was attracted by the name—Crème americaine—and the only other choices being raw peaches or cheese.

I gave it a try. It was a sort of Kirch spiced custard souffle with a

Polo Stars Plan To Play American Team

London (AP)—The Hungarian club polo committee already is laying plans for its next attempt to win the Westchester cup from the United States.

The attempt will be made in 1932 and the team probably will contain the old 1930 membership, Louis Lacy, the Argentine may wish, however, to be replaced by a younger man.

Captain C. T. I. Roark, star of the British play in the 1930 matches likely will lead the new group.

A suggestion is being considered that a British army team be sent to America to compete against an

Spurned The Dollar

Nurmi was one of the few foreign athletic satellites ever to visit the United States, receive tremendous acclaim and yet escape most of the pitfalls that go hand in hand with commercialized sport.

Unwittingly he did get into some difficulties through the demands made upon him by a number of promoters after Paavo's performances had served to fill the coffers of athletic clubs.

The Flying Finn himself left for home with the same minimum of hand baggage and the same suit with which he came to this country. His frugality was as noteworthy as his taciturnity.

Paavo resisted all overtures to turn professional, appear in the movies or furnish his byline to a syndicate "ghost-writer." The only "ghost" he seemed interested in was Father Time, to whose discomfiture he has devoted a good share of his lifetime.

England, long famous for its foot-racing talent, is concerned over the nation's lack of "massive men who throw things about."

The reference, of course, is to the so-called "field events," the mastery of which has been largely confined to the American, Scandinavian and German talent.

"In just a year from now our team of athletes will be leaving for Los Angeles to uphold the prestige of Great Britain in the Olympic Games," writes Harold Bowden, chairman of the British Olympic council, in a letter to the London Times.

"The performance of the competitors in these games will be watched by the whole world. . . . At the last Olympic games in Amsterdam, Great Britain scored only three firsts in the 94 men's events. Placed in order, according to the total number of athletes or teams who reached the first six places, the leading countries ranked as follows:

United States 70, Germany 49 Finland and France 34 each, Italy, Sweden 33 each, Great Britain 24, Holland and Canada 17 each, Switzerland 16.

WINNER OF ARLINGTON CLASSIC

In the most startling turf upset of the year America's super-race horse, Twenty Grand, was soundly beaten by A. C. Bostwick's Mate in the $36,000 Arlington, Ill., racing classic. Bostwick, a young Philadelphia millionaire, is shown holding his champion after the race. Albert Robertson who booted the colt to victory is up.

the Bostonian, as many firmly be- lieved.

Sharkey can retire at any time he pleases, with plenty of the world's visible goods in hand. He has made upwards of a million. Being a better business man than he is a fighter, he probably has most of it in property or the bank. It would be reasonable now for him to quit, since he obviously is getting no better, but the probability is he will stay in the ring, continue to provoke the boys and, nevertheless, gain a return title match with Schmeling.

Jack Drew The Talk

The experts spent more time condemning Sharkey than they did praising Walker at Ebbets Field but the fact is Mickey demonstrated little that was not already pretty well known—that he is the gamest an scrappiest fighter, for his pounds, in the ring. At that he probably would give Schmeling as good a fistic argument as any contender for the heavyweight crown in sight.

It might not be the best arrangement from the box office viewpoint, but from a sporting angle, we would like to see, Walker tackle Tommy Loughran over the 15 round distance, the winner to meet Schmeling for the championship.

The refreshing features of this would be the complete exclusion of Sharkey and Cornera.

April predictions never looked better than they did by the end of July, with the bottom dropping out of the major league pennant races faster than the stock prices tumbled in October, 1929.

The experts picked the Athletics and the Cardinals to repeat by substantial margins in the springtime and it now seems only an upheaval will prevent these rivals from exchanging base hits and harsh words again in the world's series.

Some suspicion may be aroused, however, if those arch foes and vaudeville partners, Mickey Cochrane and Burleigh Grimes, put on another hard-boiled act this October for the benefit of their customers.

Too late to demand their money back, the folks discovered last year that the heated arguments they had witnessed and become excited about were just so much ballyhoo for a skit in which Grimes did some kidding and Cochrane manipulated a saxophone. It will, therefore, be the cue for a hearty laugh if Burleigh attempts to "dust off" Mickey the first time they face each other this fall.

Why 'Experts' May Bow

The slump of the Washington Senators, after their heroic effort to keep pace with the world's champions, were not unexpected. Walter Johnson has not had the reserve strength that Connie Mack boasted, nor has the Senatorial pitching staff, except for a brief period, manifested the stamina of the cast headed by the celebrated Big Targe of the Athletics.

Over in the senior circuit, however, it has been a shock to the Loyal Giant Rooters, a band of hardy partisans, to witness the virtual collapse of John McGraw's pennant chances. New York was the club picked to give the Cardinals their toughest fight. The team assembled by McGraw looked great on paper but it has alternately been a big disappointment or suffered from injuries to such stars as Critz and Landstrom.

McGraw's personal outburst at

New Elks Leader

John R. Coen, Sterling, Cole, was elected grand exalted ruler of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks at Seattle convention.

St. Louis, the most violent in many years, failed of any purpose to arouse the Giants to a higher fighting pitch. Either the club hasn't the stuff to snap out of its slump or it lacks the spark so long characteristic of McGraw's machines, up to and including 1924. Perhaps
